TDPCC Blohm & Voss P.188

The Blohm & Voss P.188 was a late-war German bomber project that was never completed. The P.188's unusual wing shape was designed to increase performance at high and low air speeds. Initially, the P.188's high air speed convinced planners not to equip it with defensive armaments. The aircraft carried 2,200lbs (1,000kg) of ordnance. Other variants had an increased bomb load of 4,400lbs (2,000kg) and remote 13mm gun turrets.
